IN THE STOKEHOLD.

Feeding the Many Ravenous Fur-naces In an Ocean Liner.

The work of eternally pushing the old ship on past the meridians—the race against time and the sun and the interest on the money-begins in the gloomy stokehold. You have heard that the stokehold is hot, and when you have clambered into it over disorderly piles of still smoking ashes, steadying yourself by taking incautious hold of burning hand rails, and stand for the first time face to face with the furnaces you feel assured of the fact.
But, besides being hot, it is the most active, interesting part of the ship. It is her whole life. You must spend years studying it before you can stand there in command of your watch with your hand on the feed check valves, your eyes on everything in general, and keep the steam up where it belongs in spite of the ravenous engines sucking it away from you; years before you and cut down fences .- "Plain Tales can tell, in one swift glance, whether | From the Hills." a fireman is burning the greatest possile amount of coal per hour in his fires with the least amount of waste.

The problem is this: Under a certain large quantity of water, which is continually changing, build thirty fires, and by means of them, notwithstanding they must all be continually replenished with fresh coal and freed from ashes, keep it at a perfectly even temperature (within a very few degrees) day and night for an indefinit period. The game is the more interesting because a ship can never afford to spare more than just barely enough space Syne." for her propelling machinery; consequently everything-engines, bollers, furnaces-must be worked to the very limit of its capacity.

The game goes as regularly by turns and in cycles as progressive whist. Starting with a few fires first in order. the doors are opened to admit a few shovelfuls of coal thrown quickly into the front of the furnaces, then closed again as soon as possible lest too much cold air should enter. How Chinese Hatch Fish

The Chinese have a method of hatching the spawn of fish and thus protecting it from those accidents which generally destroy a large portion of it. The fishermen collect with care from the gelatinous masses which contain the spawn of fish, and after they have found a sufficient quantity they fill with it the shell of a fresh hen's egg. which they have previously emptied. ting fowl. At the expiration of a certain number of days they break the shell in water warmed by the sun. The young fry are presently hatched and are kept in pure, fresh water till they are large enough to be thrown into the pond with the old fish. The sale of spawn for this purpose forms an 1mportant branch of trade in China.

ness to a horrible humidity, twists and distorts silk, beaver, cloth and felt in no time. Mold and fungus are universal and convert sweathand and brim into green velvet in a single night. Every hat must be put out in the sunlight three times a week or it is ruined. Besides these foes are ants which go everywhere and cockroaches which fly like birds. The ant enjoys a good hat for a playground and a sleeping establishment; the cockroach desires merely to eat every particle of leather, paper and pasteboard it contains. The only way to keep the pests off is to sprinkle the interior occasionally with carbolic acid, creosote or crude cressol.

"Stories had been told which brought about a clash between the Indian and had nothing against each other. The Indian had a bad reputation—that is, he had the reputation of being a bad man, a desperate, dangerous fellow, who would fight a buzzsaw at the drop of a hat. The white man who blew into the section had in some way gained a similar reputation. He was said to be a dangerous character and a man who had never been whipped. We concluded that we would have inflammation and concluded that we would have some ulceration, and fun. We met the Indian and told him a long story about his new rival and reminded him that his laurels were in danger and succeeded in getting his pride stirred, and his Indian blood was with your instructions, it hardly know what thanks to give you for your kind favors, writes Mrs Mile Bryant, of Lota, Thomas Co., Ga. 'Ugh!' he exclaimed as he wheeled around and walked away. The white man looked at the Indian in amazement, but made no show of resentment. Later in the day when we asked the Indian why it was that he did not follow up the insult with blows he told us the white man was a coward. In explaining how he knew it he said the man's 'jaw dropped' when he struck him in the face the second time with the glove and that this, with the Indian, was an unfailing sign of cowardice."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Swift Repentance

I was eashler of Scott's state bank, and Mr. Scott and the public had every confidence in me. Nevertheless I determined to avail myself of my opportunities to rifle the safe and skip out. Between the 4th and 11th of September I arranged the details for my flight and concluded to work them out on the night of the 13th. On that evening at half past 5 the night watchman notified me that his wife had died. I excused him from watching that night. At 7 o'clock I went to the bank, of. pulled down the shades, lighted the gas and in the course of twenty minntes had packed every dollar in the vaults into a satchel provided for the purpose. You are working too hard and must take a rest. At a meeting of the board today it was decided to give you a month's leave and a gift of $500 cash," I don't remember what I said in reply, but I do remember that something like horror seized upon me at the idea of my own baseness. Right here within reach of his hand was the money I intended to fice with, and yet he was lavish in his praise of my integrity. He remained only a brief time, and soon after his departure I went outside to walk about and plan a little. I

We generally give any old potatoes away that may be left when the following senson's crop is lifted. In doing this in 1902 I saw that some of the old tubers of the 1901 crop on the chalk floor were form ing small potatoes on their surfaces. On Aug. 5 the more advanced and promising were arranged one thick in another part of the cave. Over these some finely sifted potting shed soil was sprinkled, but not to quite cover them, so that they might be carefully watched good size and excellent quality was picked. As everything looked so encouraging we made frequent succes sions to follow on, with the result that we have been gathering, not digging, young potatoes throughout the autumn

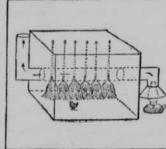

"Our practice has been to grow the earliest supply in pots, followed by frame culture. In these cases the plants have to be turned out or dug up, and the very small ones are practically wasted. In our caves we pick off those that are ready and leave the little ones to come on, so that the old tubers give a succession. Strange to say, some tubers that had borne a crop after a short interval showed signs of bearing a second time. We have tried them with fairly good results.
